The friends and relatives of Mrs. Augusta and he believes his political enemies started Harper Lynde now feel certain that she the fire. committed suicide by jumping from the Erie ferryboat Chautauqua. From the crew of the boat it was learned that she was left alone on the afterdeck of the boat on its return trip from Hoboken to this city just before 8 o'clock on Tuesday night. identified by Mrs. Lynde's son, Rollin; L. Pulsifer. The latter, through her lawyer, by her lawyer, Herbert S. Ogden, and by her maid, Eva Smith.

As soon as he learned the facts, Mr. Ogden offered a reward of $500 for the recovery of the body.

The only explanation of Mrs. Lynde's act was offered by Mr. Ogden yesterday. He believes that she was prompted to kill herself by reading about the suicide of Adolphe Openhym The disappearance | Last fall Mrs. Pulsifer brought suit against of the silk merchant aroused her interest, her husband in the Supreme Court for Mr. Ogden said, and she read every line separation, and incidentally a motion was bearing on the case and was constantly discussing it with her friends.

"Her interest in the matter struck me as morbid at the time," said Mr. Ogden yesterday, "but it never occurred to me then that it could have any influence on her. What has happened since convinces me that her death was directly traceable to the Openhym case. If ever there was a case of auto-suggestion hers was one." Mrs. Lynde left the Van Corlear apartment house about 6 o'clock on Tuesday evening. She was seen boarding the Chautauqua just before the boat left hdr Twenty-third street slip for Hoboken at 7:25 o'clock. Although the boat was crowded at the time,

Although the boat was crowded at the time, Mrs. Lynde was noticed by the deckhands on account of her dress.

When the Chautauqua reached Hobbken, Mrs. Lynde went ashore with the rest of the passengers. A deckhand saw her go into the women's waiting room. After sitting there till the crowd had scattered she bought a new ticket and returned to the Chautauqua, taking a seat on a bench just outside the entrance to the women's just outside the entrance to the women's cabin.
Two of the three deckhands had their stations on the foredeck. The third one who was stationed aft, saw Mrs. Lynde about three minutes after the boat left Hoboken. Then he went forward to get a broom. The first thing he noticed on his return was that the woman had dis-appeared, leaving her gray sealskin chat-elaine bag on the bench.

appeared, leaving her gray sealskin chatelaine bag on the bench.

He picked up the bag and made a round of the cabins looking for the owner, but none of the passengers recalled seeing the woman in gray. Finally the man reported to the mate, who ordered him to make a search among the carriages in the middle of the boat. This was fruitless.

When the boat reached the slip, the decknand stood at one gangplank while the mate, who had also seen Mrs. Lynde, watched the other one. The woman was not seen to leave the boat.

"I think these facts dispose of any doubt that might exist with regard to Mrs. Lynde's fate," said Mr. Ogden yesterday. "I have communicated with the police on this side as well as across the river. The greatest possible publicity will be given my offer

SUICIDE OF EMILE BONTHOUX. Once Prosperous Broadway Photographer Takes Cyanide of Potassium.

Emile Bonthoux, a photographer of 752 Wendover avenue, The Bronx, committed suicide yesterday at his photograph gallery, 182 East 120th street, by taking cyanide of potassium. Frederick Guryear, his partner. told the police that Bonthoux had been very despondent for several months and lately had been drinking heavily.

Bonthoux came to this country from France about twenty years ago. He wrote and made sketches for the French newspapers. At one time he had a photographic studio on Broadway near Grace Church and there did a prosperous

Bonthoux left several letters addressed to his family, the Coroner and the police. The note addressed to the Coroner reads:

Name, Emile Bonthoux. Born in St. Denis, near Paris, June 15th, 1849. Unable to make a living for my family for the last eight months with no prospect for the future. I think it is better for an old man like me to get out of the way, as even the friends I helped will not do anything for me and ridicule my old age. Cyanide of potassium is the cause of death. Bonthoux leaves a widow and two sons:

Mrs. Crissel Paroled-Apoplexy After a Spree Killed Mrs. Paine.

Mrs. Annie Crissel, who was arrested on Wednesday charged with homicide in causing the death of her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Paine of 633 First avenue, while they were on their way home from Mount Olivet Cemetery, where Mrs. Paine's husband had been buried, was arraigned before Magistrate Connorton in the Long Island City police court yesterday.

When the Magistrate had heard the woman's story he paroled her, and told her to go home and attend to the burial of her mother.

Mrs. Crissel told the Magistrate that her father and mother were both accustomed to go on spress occasionally. They had kept up a debauch until last Monday, when her father had been found dead in a chair. She said that her mother had been drinking heavily when they started for the cemetery on Wednesday. She insisted on stopping at saloons both going and coming. The coachman was drinking too, and was willing to stop, despite the daughter's Finally Policeman Sullivan, on the com-

ONE KILLED, SIX INJURED.

Collision of Freight Trains on the New Haven Railroad at Stormville. NEWBURGH, April 30 .- One person was killed and six were injured in a head-on collision between freight trains last night on the New Haven Railroad at Stormville,

Dutchess county. A confusion of order caused the accident. A double-header, consisting of thirtysix loaded cars, with one engine ahead and one between it and the train, was coming down the grade going east, in front of Horton's Hotel, in Stormville, N.Y., running quite fast, when a freight train going west, with orders to make the siding at Storm ville, came into sight. The two trains came together with a crash. The eighteen cars in the first section of the eastbound train were ditched, and the three engines of the two trains collided with such violence that all three were wrecked. L. A. Haynes, fireman on the first engine of the double-header, was caught between the tender and engine and squeezed tightly in a space of a few inches. For five hours he remained in this position while the railroad men, assisted by people residing in the vicinity, worked heroically to effect his release.

PLENTY OF ASPIRANTS FOR JUS-TICE GOODRICH'S PLACE.

Brooklyn Republicans Don't Want to Yield the Nomination to Lexow or Any Other River-County Man-McLaughtin Would Like A. Van Wyck-Not so Murphy

The Republican statesmen of Brooklyn are already discussing the selection of a candidate for the Supreme Court in the Second district to be nominated this fall in place of Justice W. W. Goodrich, who by reason of the age limit is to retire at the close of the year. It is understood that the Republican politicians from the river counties in the district intend to claim the nomination for their territory this year, but the Brooklyn leaders have decided to urge the selection of a Brooklyn lawyer, on the ground that Justice Goodrich belongs to Kings county and on account of the scarcity of resident Judges. Among the men suggested for the nomination are Assistant Corporation Counsel James McKeen and George F. Elliott.

In some quarters it is urged that the nomination of J. Edward Swanstrom, President of the borough, who is an independent Democrat, would be a shrewd political move, as it would be likely to help the fusion ticket. The organization Republicans, however, would strenuously oppose such a proposition. Among the up-State lawyers who have been named as possible can-didates are ex-Senator Lexow of Rockland county and ex-Senator Mills of Westchester. On the Democratic side there are likely to be five or six candidates for the nomination, and among those looming up prominently are ex-Justice Augustus Van Wyck, who resigned his place on the bench in 1898 to run for Governor, ex-Corporation Coursel, Carr. District. Attorney Clarke.

1898 to run for Governor, ex-Corporation Counsel Carr, District Attorney Clarke, and Thomas E. Pearsall.

Hugh McLaughlin would probably prefer Van Wyck to any other candidate who might be named, but it is said that Mr. Murphy, the leader of Tammany, believes that Van Wyck's name on the ticket would be likely to hurt the Mayoralty candidate, whoever he may be, and that a hint to that effect has been communicated to Mr. whoever he may be, and that a hint to that effect has been communicated to Mr
